

HOPEFUL HERBERT

BY KAULEE

Hopeful Herbert knows that building of a peace that's just and fair Calls for more than wishful thinking and a willingness to share;
If the U.N. is to function, it must have the wherewithal—
Guards and trucks and good equipment, workers at its beck and call.

That's why many U.N. members are insisting that there be A United Nations Guard to back U.N.'s authority;
To protect the U.N. Missions and the work they have to do, In whatever far-off regions that their duties take them to.

Herbert knows that a Committee has been working very hard,
To decide on how to set up a United Nations Guard.
And he hopes the U.N. session that is getting under way,
Will approve the Guard's creation without any more delay.

Herbert wants
The U.N. strengthened
For the job
It has to do.
For he knows
A stronger U.N.
Can do better
Work for you!

HOPEFUL HERBERT

BY KAULEE

Every time he reads a headline about fighting far away, Hopeful Herb becomes more grateful that the U.N.'s here to stay.
For he knows a little fire raging on some foreign shore
All too often spreads its embers until all the world's at war.

Herbie's seen U.N. Commissions stepping in to stop a fight.
Mediating nations' quarrels; standing for what's just and right.
In Trieste, in Indonesia, in embattled Kashmir, too,
Even in the Berlin stalemate, U.N. leadership came through.

South Korea's free elections and a truce in Palestine,
And a brand new State of Israel all make U.N.'s record shine;
And it's clear to Hopeful Herbert and to all who know the score, That a strong United Nations is insurance against war.

That's why Herb
Is up and doing Everything
That he can do.
Backing the United Nations
—For the U.N.
Works for you!

HOPELESS HENRY

BY KAULEE

Years ago, when he was younger, Hopeless
Henry was the squirt
Who would take each new opinion and then grind it into dirt.
If the fellows, in a huddle, figured out a brand new play, Henry, always the wet blanket, said, "It can't be done that way."

Henry's draft board changed his status, but it couldn't change his mind:
A more pessimistic soldier it was really hard to find.
He was sure we'd lose each battle; he just knew our planes would stall:
When he talked about our allies — "they had nothing on the ball."

Henry's laid aside his khaki, but his line is just as bad —
Now he pans United Nations, says the whole thing's just a fad.
Henry picks on different countries, different races, different creeds.
Says they couldn't work together to meet everybody's needs.

But we're not
All hopeless Henrys;
We can make
The U.N. strong.
If we all
Get in there pitching,
Then the job
Won't take so long!

HOPELESS HENRY

BY KAULEE

Henry thinks the atom know-how is a secret we can keep.
And he laughs when science tells us other lands are not asleep:
So he won't agree that if a global war should come again,
We may face atomic bombing of our cities and our men.

Henry can't see why it's urgent to protect our victory.
With United Nations action on atomic energy
So that countries big and little need not live in constant dread
Of some dreadful secret weapon hanging darkly overhead.

But we're not all Hopeless Henrys, and we know that unity
Is the one and only safeguard against war's barbarity:
We can use the atom wisely if we figure from the start,
That we all must work together or we'll all be blown apart.

That's why folks
Of all religions
And of every Shade of skin
Have to live As friends and neighbors

In this one world
That we're in!

HOPELESS HERMAN

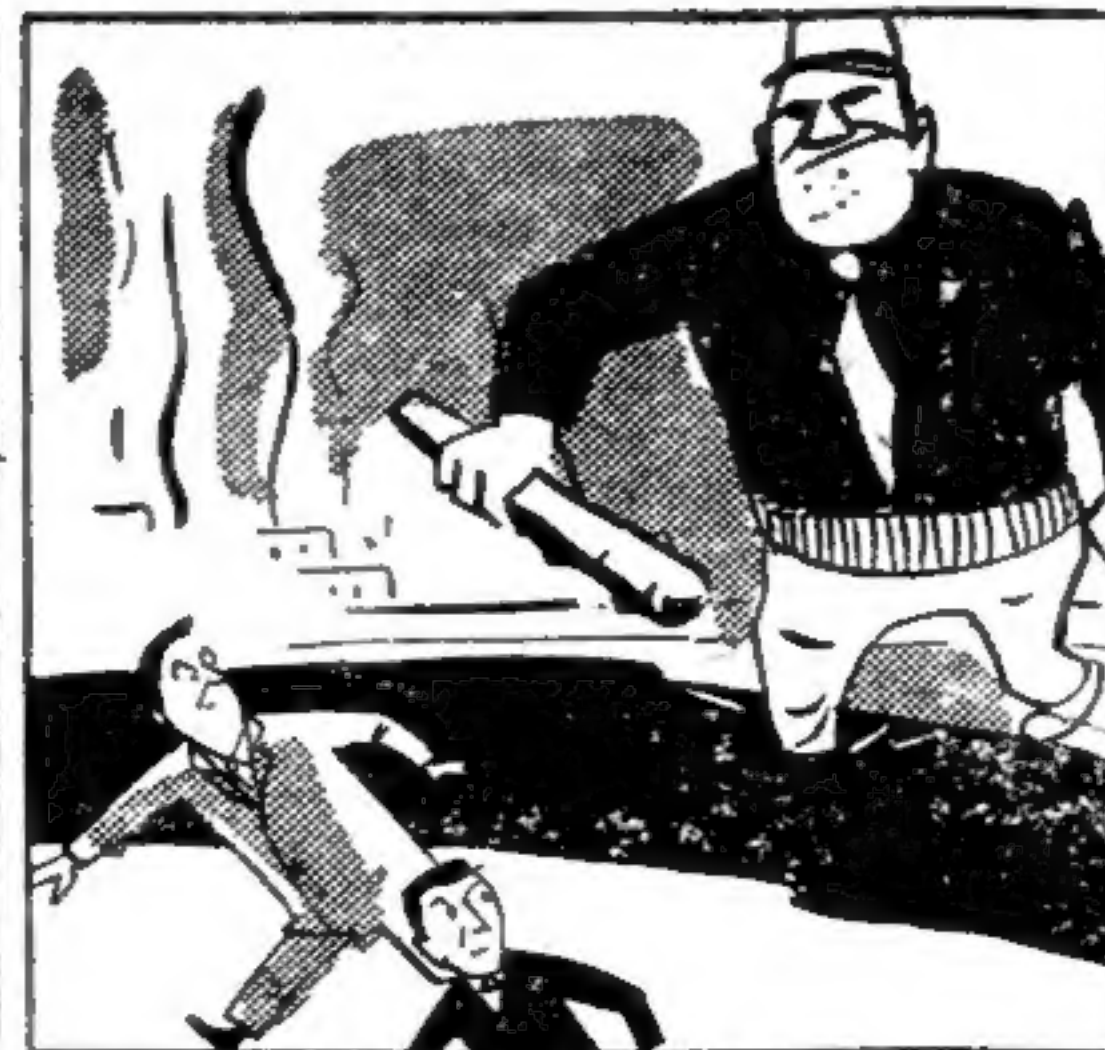

BY KAULEE

Hopeless Herman's always ready to jump right into the fray To defend the Constitution of the good old U.S.A.;
But it's clear that Hopeless Herman doesn't really know the score, When it comes to guarding freedoms over on some foreign shore.

Herman can't see any danger that's directed against him.
When some folks in other nations have to serve a tyrant's whim,
So he fails to see the reason why the U.N. has to act,
To make sure that every country keeps its people's rights intact.

But we're not all Hopeless Hermans and we know that tyranny Never keeps within the boundaries of "some land across the sea."
For when speech and press and worship are not free for everyone, We may all wind up with bullets from some would-be Hitler's gun!

That's what makes it So important
For us all
To set our sights
On the quick
U.N. adoption
Of a world-wide
Bill of Rights.

HOPELESS HERMAN

BY KAULEE

Hopeless Herman runs to doctors if he hears a neighbor wheeze,
And he's sure he's got pneumonia when his wife begins to sneeze.
Hopeless Herman's very careful to protect his healthy state.
But he's never very worried about other people's fate.

Though he reads of epidemics laying countless millions low,
And he knows that malnutrition is a very bitter foe.
Hopeless Herman, who's so certain that your cold will strike him dead, Has forgotten that diseases overseas can also spread!

But we're not all Hopeless Hermans and we know that peace depends On two billion healthy people who have learned to live as friends.
And we know that U.N. efforts to wipe out disease and need Will bring joy to every nation, every race and every creed.

It's another Great step forward In preventing Global strife—
The World Health Organization
That the U.N.'s
Brought to life.
